WANDA GARLAND

Thameside reflexions: paintings

An exhibition of some 50 paintings on canvas, varying in size between 20cm and 100cm. There are also some linocuts, etchings and sketches. These works were executed very recently, in the years between 2009 and early 2012. They cover the stretch of the River Thames between Vauxhall and the Barrier.

The paintings portray changes of mood, architecture and movement: so you have a delicate, pinky-blue view of Vauxhall in contrast with the arrow-like thrust of the Millennium Bridge attacking the North Bank, painted in clashing colours. We also see human activities in the shape of big crowds by Tower Bridge and St Pauls, or individuals skate-boarding, kayaking, sand-castle building and mudlarking.

The exhibition reflects the dynamism of London's Thames, the contrasting architecture between the new Canary Wharf docklands and the much older, tightly packed old City of London.
